

Design Type: Generator

A Generator is anyone who has the sacral center (big red square in your chart) defined whether that is a pure generator or a Manifesting Generator. A Pure Generator will have a defined sacral center and either an undefined throat or a defined throat connected to one of the non-motors. Generators are 37% of the population.

You are a Pure Generator and the most common type in design; the builders and workers of the world with the capacity to generate vitality, sexuality, and life itself. Your sacral motor is your workforce motor and the key to your authentic power. As a Generator you are designed to respond in life. You are not here to initiate and take action, even though that is probably your conditioning. You are designed to respond. And, you respond based on the energy available for a commitment. Your sacral motor is your navigation tool for responding and making choices with clarity and confidence.

Just like a car needs a key to turn it on, the sacral motor is turned on by two non-verbal sounds. Those two sounds are Uh-huh and Un-un. When you use these sounds your power for response is accessed and realized bringing a level of energetic commitment that otherwise would not be available. Think this is a little odd? Imagine two children fighting. Right before the stage of tantrums fighting, what is it that they say to one another? "UH-huh, Un-un, uh-huh, un-un! Do you feel the power in those non-verbal sounds? Would the words "yes or no" carry that same power? As children we were conditioned to be polite and say, "yes ma'am and no ma'am", cutting us off from the very source of our inner truth, power and authenticity. We begin to forget who we are and how to access our power for making choices.

Your strategy is response and waiting to respond. The response is to what is correct for you; what you are available for. It is not about initiating. Stop initiating and simply wait. Trust the waiting. Your sacral motor is like a magnet that draws events, people and circumstances to you for response. Experiment with it. You will notice how you have been depleting your power and vitality initiating and responding to what is not correct for you. Your strategy is clear-cut. What is difficult is stopping the conditioning. What is difficult can be the waiting. What can be difficult is not honoring your strategy and entering into relationships and jobs that you don't like, that you don't have the energy for. When this happens you quit. Generators are the great quitters of the world and it is only because they aren't entering jobs and relationships from there point of power.

Trust your strategy and learn to be patient. Wait for something to respond to. Respond from your nonverbal sacral sounds. This is your truth and power for moving into relationships with people and events that will create life of ease and flow for you. This is not about initiating or doing what others think you ought to do. Use your secret weapon. Stop the frustration and create the flow.